We've Changed Our Look!

This “new and improved” issue of The Valley reflects the exciting changes occurring all over campus. From our new College President, John A. Synodinos, to the Edward H. Arnold Sports Center, it is becoming increasingly evident that Lebanon Valley College is on the move!

If you have any comments or suggestions, please feel free to call the editors at 717/867-6220.

The Edward H. Arnold Sports Center Opens Its Doors

by Dawn Greene

From Plato to the Renaissance, great thinkers have always believed that a complete education must include cultivation of the mind, the spirit, and the body.

On February 19, 1988, Lebanon Valley College, concerned that its programs be complete, opened the doors to its new educational facility — the Edward H. Arnold Sports Center.

Over the past 20 years, physical fitness has moved from fad to fact. There has been a revolution in America in our attitudes about health, exercise, and diet. People have found that there is a direct correlation between physical activity and general well-being, personal worth, and self-expectation. In the early 1980s, it became increasingly apparent that physical recreation needed to become a larger part of the Lebanon Valley College experience.

Today, with an estimated 26 million people in the U.S. participating in individualized, noncompetitive sports, a recreational complex is certainly an asset for student recruitment. "Students, even though they may not be varsity athletes, do look for athletic recreation," said Lou Sorrentino '54, director of athletics. "The building provides yet another incentive for prospective students to select Lebanon Valley College."

There were also growing needs within the intercollegiate athletic programs. Lynch Gymnasium, built in 1950 as the premier college athletic facility in the Middle Atlantic Conference, could no longer keep up with the College's expanding sports programs. "Since Lynch was built, we have gone from six to 14 intercollegiate teams and 20 intramural sports activities for men and women," said Sorrentino. "We kept adding more sports teams, but were still using the same facilities."

With the addition of the Arnold Sports Center, Lebanon Valley College now proudly offers all students the opportunity to develop lifetime habits that will keep them healthier and happier during and after college. The multi-million dollar complex offers students a pool, indoor track, four basketball/volleyball/tennis/badminton courts, and three racquetball courts (one converts for squash). Other features include locker/shower rooms, saunas, and outdoor restrooms and concessions stands to support the outdoor athletic fields.

Additionally, Kevin Yeiser, director of grounds and athletic facilities, makes it his full-time job to assure that everyone who enters the building will be able to utilize all of the facility's resources to the fullest.

But the building is not all there is to the Arnold Sports Center. The facility's story, from its inception, to the groundbreaking, to opening day, has been one of dedicated individuals, concerned for the well-being of Lebanon Valley students, alumni, and Lebanon County community members.

In 1984, George Marquette '48, vice president for student affairs and dean of students, and Robert Unger '69, former director of alumni relations and cross-country coach, discussed the need to upgrade the recreational facilities on campus. "Because of the growth in the intercollegiate programs, Lynch was becoming increasingly unavailable to the general student body—especially during the winter months when everything moves indoors," said Marquette. "We arrived at the conclusion that there was a growing need on campus for improved recreational programming, but we wanted to have input from others," said Marquette.

The pair presented their thoughts to former College President Arthur Peterson who whole-heartedly approved the formation of a study committee, chaired by Marquette, to look at the College's athletic/recreational programs and its needs.

The committee made two recommendations in the spring of 1985: construct a facility that would provide for improved recreational and intramural programs; and move the entire athletic program out of Lynch to the area by the Arnold football field.

"When we had the okay for the facility, the committee then determined that the building would be the first phase of the overall project and would be dedicated solely to the recreational needs of our students, alumni, and local community members," said Marquette. "Additional facilities would be constructed later for intercollegiate contests and athletic offices."

The College initiated the 125th Anniversary Campaign to raise the money for the complex and for the life and work of the College. Campaign funds fall into three categories: improvements to recreational programs with a new facility, $3 million;

College endowment, $3 million; and funding for special programs and projects, $500 thousand.

Early in the campaign, trustee Edward Arnold, whose family has had a long-standing and strongly supportive relationship with Lebanon Valley College, made a significant financial commitment to the project. Like his father, Henry, a former College trustee for which the Arnold Athletic Fields are named, Ed Arnold is committed to the opportunities that Lebanon Valley offers Lebanon County residents.

"My only stipulation was that they include a swimming pool in the building," said Arnold. "I believed it was absolutely essential that it be a part of a recreational facility."

Construction began with a groundbreaking ceremony in April 1987 and was completed within a year.

Harlan Wengert, College trustee, also made a significant contribution to the project in the memory of his father, Samuel, who was a College trustee and lifetime supporter of the institution. The building's lobby is named in Samuel Wengert's honor.

First to take advantage of the new facility was Peterson, who came back from retirement in Florida to fulfill his promise to be the first to swim in the pool during the building's February opening ceremonies. Lebanon Valley College's 14th President set the initial Arnold Sports Center swimming record: 48 seconds for one lap. He invited any student beating his time for a glass of iced tea at his Florida home.

Being "dedicated solely to the recreational needs of students, alumni, and local community members" means a lot more, however, than simply raising funds and constructing a building. It also means having a caring staff to develop programs that will interest students and teach them about health and physical education. The College has done just that. Rusty Owens '61, supervisor of program activities for the recreation center, is excited about the potential that the building has to help individuals develop lifetime habits; but he recognizes that the building itself cannot educate the students. "You can't separate intramural recreation programs from the complex," said Owens. "They must go hand in hand."

Owens intentionally distinguishes between "intramural" and "intramural recreation." "When most people picture 'intramural' they see groups of fraternities playing intensely competitive football games," said Owens. "Intramural recreation, on the other hand, is getting students involved in individualized lifetime sports...less competition, more discipline and goal-setting."

Owens and Niki E. Raudenski, building secretary and activities instructor, have already been hard at work upgrading student-based intramural recreational activities. Already in place are racquetball tournaments, walking and running clubs, and a water aerobics program.

The activities are oriented toward educating the participants on their entire "physical selves." "In the water aerobics program, in addition to 20 minutes of cardiovascular work and toning, we go through a series of stress release and relaxation techniques," said Raudenski. "We teach them to be in tune with their bodies so that they can identify which parts contain the most stress. Then we show them techniques, which can be used throughout the day, for eliminating the stress in that area."

The building's staff is hoping the complex will soon be used to its full capacity and is planning to start student and community fitness clubs, biathlon clubs, Stairs ascending from the Arnold Sports Center lobby lead to offices and an observation view of the pool, arena, and racquetball court areas.

100-mile clubs, and racquetball clinics. They are also planning to begin working with "special population" groups such as the elderly, the handicapped, and the young. "I want Lebanon Valley to be the 'number one' College in the state for recreational activities," said Owens. "We already have over 1,000 people using the building per week."

The new facility is making it possible for the College to have its "first ever" swim team. Although, this year, the group competes only as a club, President John A. Synodinos has given his approval to start an intercollegiate team coached by Rusty Owens '61, for the 1989-90 academic year.

Lebanon Valley College is also very interested that the facility serve to add to its existing services for alumni and community members. Memberships for alumni and the community became available in September and the response has been overwhelming.

Despite all of the excitement over Arnold, Lynch Gymnasium will not be left behind like an old toy. For the time being, it will continue to house all intercollegiate basketball and volleyball contests, athletic staff offices, weight room, equipment room, and training room. Spillman Farmer Architects, Bethlehem, PA, made recommendations for Lynch Gymnasium when they came in early 1988 to look at the overall campus and academic plan. They suggest that Lynch has many applications. "The building offers an opportunity to provide a primary academic facility on the main quadrangle. It is an under-utilized resource right in the center of campus," said Bob Spillman, president of the architectural firm.

Lebanon Valley College has come a long way since it held its basketball practices in the basement of the Administration Building. The College is proud of its accomplishments and very thankful for the dedication of concerned individuals like the Arnolds, the Wengerts, former College President Arthur Peterson, and Dean George Marquette, who have helped develop this institution over the years.

The Edward H. Arnold Sports Center demonstrates Lebanon Valley College's commitment that its students receive the most complete education possible. Said Marquette, "the building symbolizes the College's belief that life-long physical activity is a critical component in people's lives."

General Policy and Membership Information for the Edward H. Arnold Sports Center

The Arnold Sports Center offers the following to members:

1. A six-lane, 25-meter pool
2. Three racquetball courts which can be converted into "wallyball" courts
3. Two dry saunas
4. Arena area which includes four courts each converting into basketball, volleyball, tennis, or badminton courts
5. A four-lane, 200-meter track

All areas will be available at designated times in accordance with specific policies of the Sports Center.

Dedication of the Edward H. Arnold Sports Center

The official dedication of the new complex was held during Parents' Day, October 22, at 10:30 a.m. The "standing room only" crowd of alumni, parents, and friends paid tribute to Dr. Edward H. Arnold, the Wengert Family and many others who worked so hard to make this dream a reality.

Playgrounds Through The Years

The "Phantom Gym" as it appeared in the 1903 College catalogue.

by Edna Carmean '59

The first athletic facility at Lebanon Valley College was the College lawn. It provided the necessary open space for the oldest sport at the institution, croquet, and then for baseball.

Baseball was amazingly popular. An old graduate in 1875 wrote that the game was played every afternoon. When the supper bell rang at five-thirty, bats and balls were discarded only to be picked up again when the meal was over.

By 1882, the game was thoroughly organized. It was announced in the College's student newspaper, The LaVie, that "a fourth 'nine' had just elected officers"; this meant that in a student body of only 134, there were 36 ball players! When an outside team challenged the College to a game, neither team was above hiring "ringers" (usually expert pitchers) to fill in their weak spots.

In 1893, Lebanon Valley College had one of the finest ball grounds in the country, in addition to two tennis courts and a beautiful croquet ground. This outdoor facility was located between Sheridan Avenue and the Main Building, on the north side of campus.

In the meantime, indoor recreation was not being neglected. In 1882, members of the Kalozetean Literary Society hand-dug space for a gymnasium under the south end of the old Main Building. For several years, Kalo retained control of the new indoor facility, but generously offered access to all students at certain hours on payment of a small fee.

Football was organized in 1897. It was extremely popular, and the next year the Lebanon Valley College team played a schedule of games which included Susquehanna, Ursinus, Gettysburg, and the state teachers colleges. At first the game was played on campus, but in 1903, a new athletic field on Maple Street, described as "six acres enclosed and fitted up for all phases of modern athletics," was bought. Two years later, it acquired a grandstand and bleachers. For close to 40 years, it was common on Saturday afternoons in the fall to see the student and town fans streaming out along Maple Street to the football games.

The fields are still owned by the College, but are on loan to the community of Annville/Cleona as a recreation area.

Basketball had a slower start. There was no place to play this game. However, after Engle Hall, with its fine auditorium, was built in 1899, the old chapel in the Main Building was converted to a basketball "cage." The rostrum and seats were ripped out and both men's and women's teams were organized.

That lasted four years, until the great fire of Christmas Eve, 1904, when the building was destroyed. When it was rebuilt, there was no basketball cage. The men were able to play in the Annville Town Hall, but the women had to give up the game for a time.

There was general rejoicing in 1902, when it was announced at Commencement that a gift had been made to the College of a new gymnasium. Foundations were laid for the new gymnasium in the area where the library now stands. A picture of the architect's rendition of the building appeared in the College catalog, which said it was being built of limestone and would be modern in every detail.

Suddenly, the work stopped. The money supply had dried up. The picture vanished from the catalog. For several years, there was a big hole in the ground which the students referred to mockingly as "Our Phantom Gym." The rubble was finally cleared away.

In 1914, there was a step forward. A gymnasium was built in the south end of the Administration Building. Its cost of $5,000 had been donated by Lebanon Valley alumni. The new Alumni Gymnasium was spacious, with the playing floor on the basement level and a balcony which opened on the first floor. The balcony served as a running track as well as a vantage point for spectators. This gymnasium was used for parties and dances as well as for basketball.

The Alumni Gymnasium served the College well until 1951, when the Lynch Memorial Gymnasium was opened. This building was a welcome addition, but it put a temporary crimp in another popular sport when it was built on the site of five tennis courts.

Football was dropped during World War II. When it resumed after the war, the old Maple Street field was not adequate. Home games were played on the Lebanon High School football field, but the old field was still used for practice. In 1944, a plot of 16 acres north of the campus, across the railroad tracks, was purchased for the new Arnold Athletic Fields. It was not sufficiently developed for games for more than ten years, and it was not until the mid-seventies that the two sections of the campus were directly connected by a covered walk-way across the railroad tracks.

The fields, which include football, baseball, field hockey, soccer, and two tennis courts, have seen some additional development over the past two years, with the construction of the new Edward H. Arnold Sports Center. In the spring and summer of 1987, irrigation systems were installed for the football and field hockey fields. In addition, the field hockey field was leveled to make it NCAA regulation size and re-sodded. Because the new sports complex was built on part of the old soccer field, the team had to play its contests on the Lebanon High School soccer field last season. However, their field was relocated north of the new complex this summer and is ready for competition.

Although there are further plans for improvements to the football stadium and Lynch, with the final landscaping touches around the new building, Lebanon Valley College begins the 1988-89 athletic year with the most complete and the most attractive sports/recreation facilities in its history.

A Unique Slide

First-Ever Trombone Quartet-In-Residence at Lebanon Valley College

by John Deamer

What musical instrument is over 500 years old, is so versatile that nearly all styles of music from c. 1450 to 1988 have been played on it, and recently had a quartet-in-residence formed in its honor?

The trombone, of course.

Once called the "sackbut," the trombone is the oldest of all band and orchestra instruments that retains its original form. Historically, trombones have been used widely in ceremonial bands as well as churches; however, they are most often blended with voices and other instruments.

Today, with the exception of the "Big Band" sound made famous by Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller, the trombone is still more or less identified as a band instrument.

Now, at Lebanon Valley College, a four-man group is undertaking to change all of that.

In January, Jim Erdman, adjunct instructor of low brass, and founder of the "Quartet/Die Posaunen," presented a concept to Dr. Robert C. Lau, chairperson of the music department, and to Dr. William J. McGill, dean of the faculty. "Why not establish a trombone quartet-in-residence at Lebanon Valley?"

"There were two things that intrigued me about the concept of having the group in residence at the College," said Lau. "First, the group offers a unique cultural experience; and, second, these four professionals are high-calibre musicians that have reached near-perfection on their instruments. I wanted our students to have yet another opportunity to be exposed to this kind of musical excellence."

While the concept of a trombone quartet might have seemed unusual to Lebanon Valley College, it is not new. Trombone quartets have been used by composers for centuries, from Marini to Beethoven and from Schutz to Stravinsky. In 1695, Purcell made an unforgettable use of a trombone quartet in his music for the funeral of Queen Mary.

Because of its unusual design, the trombone has some unique qualities. Unlike the other instruments of the brass family (e.g. the trumpet, the french horn), which are limited in the number of producible notes by the "harmonic series of overtones," the trombone, being furnished with a slide, has a greater musical flexibility. This chromatic versatility, coupled with the fact that their narrower bell allows them to be played softly and blendingly, produces some beautiful results.

"Audiences are often pleased to discover that this instrument can so masterfully produce sounds that instill in the listener feelings of majesty, excitement, or love," said Erdman.

While Erdman has always been dedicated to the instrument, his resolve to demonstrate the trombone's potential to stand alone was renewed in 1981 at the annual International Trombone Association Workshop where he heard a 30-piece college trombone choir. The concert renewed Erdman's long-time yearning for conducting and inspired him to gather trombone players he knew throughout Central Pennsylvania that would be interested in playing professionally.

Out of this experience eventually grew the foursome now known as "Quartet/Die Posaunen" (which is German for "the trombones"). The first of its kind in an American college or university, the ensemble-in-residence's inaugural performance was in February 1988 at the College's Founders' Day Ceremonies.

The group's repertoire includes a mix of contemporary, religious, and jazz pieces. Because they play a variety of music — from 17th century compositions to "Polka Dots and Moonbeams" — they are becoming very popular in South Central Pennsylvania.

"Of course we play for special events at the College such as this fall's Opening Convocation, but are willing to perform at community and church events also," says Dr. Robert Hearson, a member of the ensemble and assistant music professor at the College.

"The group's availability was another thing that intrigued me about having them in-residence," said Lau. "Now, in addition to some of our other touring ensembles, Lebanon Valley College is represented to the general public by a professional musical organization."

In August, the group cut a Christmas album, "Christmas Ornaments," which will be available to the public in late October on cassette, and compact disc.

Behind the scenes, one discovers that the "Quartet/Die Posaunen" has been more than just a quartet-in-residence, it has become a Lebanon Valley College family affair. The group's musical arrangements are written by two Lebanon Valley alumni, Rodney Miller '77 and Tom Strohman '75, adjunct instructor in music; the group's original logo was developed by Becky Long '88; and Christmas album recording engineer was John Uhl '79, director of media services.

"It has been exciting having the group on campus," said Lau. "I think that everyone can benefit from their pursuit of musical excellence."

No doubt, this "unique slide" has kindled a lot of motivation.

Those interested in arranging for the group to perform at an event can call the music department at 717/867-6275.

Everything's Coming Up Roses...Again

Unbelievably, as we "wrap-up" Alumni Weekend 1988 in this issue, it is also time to begin thinking about Alumni Weekend 1989, June 2, 3, and 4. Because of the overwhelming response to last year's program, this year's theme, once again, is roses! The Alumni Programs Planning Committee is already hard at work putting together the weekend's schedule.

Also, Reunion Committees for the Classes of '24, '29, '34, '39, '44, '49, '54, and '59 are being formed. If you are interested in serving on your reunion committee or would like more information on your reunion, call the Alumni Services Office at 717/867-6220.

Alumni Awards Luncheon

The Alumni Association Awards Luncheon was held on Saturday, June 4, at 12:00 noon, to recognize outstanding graduates of Lebanon Valley College. This year, there were five Alumni Citation winners who were selected on the basis of occupational or professional achievement, community service, or service to the College. They were (l-r): G. Harold Bucher '47, John Eby '57, Ross W. Fasick '55, Irma K. Shearer '36, and Daniel L. Shearer '38.

Also during the luncheon, seven alumni were inducted into the Miles Rigor Society for 20 years or more of dedicated service to the College. They were: Martin L. Gluntz '53, Evelyn Toser '52, Thomas C. Reinhart '58, Jane Gruber Seiverling '43, William H. Kelly '54, Alice Daniel Kelly '54, and Merle L. Wise '53.

Although the Distinguished Alumnus Award winner for outstanding achievement, Dr. Mark Diethelm '53 of Switzerland, could not be present to receive his accolades, the alumni were treated to a video-taped "acceptance speech," shown during the luncheon.

Diethelm's address focused on the importance of leadership. "There is just no equivalent for leadership. To prepare for this and for responsible behavior in the community, a wide liberal arts education is a tremendous asset...[This type of] education makes for the utmost in intellectual flexibility and inducting one's trained critical abilities while at the same time preparing us to adapt well to our environment and our duties in the community.

...From my viewpoint, Lebanon Valley College is an ideal college considering the size, its academic outlook, its constant endeavors to improve and add new programs for its students, and its dedication to helping shape tomorrow's leaders. Best qualified leaders are not only of the utmost importance to a corporation, but they are vital for making better citizens, a better community, and creating a better environment for us, our children, and our grandchildren."

Lebanon Valley Greet The Class of 1992

For those who have experienced it, either as a student or as a parent, it is not difficult to remember the emotion of the first days of college — anxiety over the changes occurring can be overwhelming. Although these fears cannot be erased, the Student Affairs Office is working toward making the first days at Lebanon Valley College easier for students and parents alike with their "New Student Orientation" program.

On Saturday, August 27th, at 10:00 a.m., residence halls opened for the freshmen. These students were greeted at their new "homes" by 50 "Student Orientation Leaders" donning bright blue t-shirts imprinted with "Here to Assist You." Each leader was assigned a specific group of new students.

The Student Orientation Leaders, who were selected from applications and interviews, attended a two-day training session to prepare them to address the new students' concerns and to help them get to know each other. "Because these upperclassmen were carefully chosen and properly trained, this was probably the best new student orientation that we've had," said Rosemary Yuhas, assistant dean of students. "There was more opportunity for social bonding, both among the new students and between the freshmen and the upperclassmen."

The College Auxiliary's Annual Plant Sale provides an opportunity for anxious parents to help beautify their students' new "homes."

"It was nice to have a reason to leave my daughter's dorm room," said one mother. "I was so upset about leaving her that I didn't know whether to help her get settled, or leave her alone to let her do it herself. This has been a lovely afternoon."

Later that evening, after most of the parents had left, the new students had further opportunity to get to know each other at "Play Fair" where they played non-competitive icebreaking games.

Over the following two weeks, the freshmen had the opportunity to get to know themselves better during a new student seminar series. In the seminars, they learned time management skills, study skills, and career assessment processes. They also examined issues surrounding the consumption of alcohol, and intrapersonal relationships.

"It really helped to have the opportunity to go through the orientation program," said freshman Kathryn Ford. "It relieved some of my anxiety about what lies ahead."

After getting settled into their rooms and having a buffet lunch, freshmen and their parents attended the College's Opening Convocation ceremony at 2:00 p.m. The ceremony, which had something of the feeling of a "converse baccalaureate" service, included greetings by College President John A. Synodinos.

On a day underscored by change, Lebanon Valley's "freshman president" urged the new students to seek out the values and patterns that continue throughout one's life.

Synodinos emphasized that students should "always look for the common connection" in their courses and ask "the larger questions." "The questions you ask will be as important as the answers you put on a quiz. We can help you learn how to learn," he said.

The new president also made the following request to the incoming freshmen on behalf of their parents: "Call or write sometimes even when you don't need something."

The parents in the audience applauded.

During the Opening Convocation Ceremony, in a "matriculation oath," the new students affirmed their wish to "pursue the ideals of learning, of service, and of moral and spiritual commitment" that Lebanon Valley College espouses.

After the ceremony, the new students and their parents were invited to meet President and Mrs. Synodinos at their Kreiderheim home. There, they shared with the president, administrators, faculty, and other parents their excitement and apprehension over the changes in their lives.

Scholarship Benefactors Luncheon Held

A "Scholarship Benefactors Luncheon" was held on campus in September to allow endowed scholarship benefactors, who came from as far as Maine and San Francisco, to meet their scholarship's 1988-89 student recipients.

"There was so much good-feeling in the air," said Ellen Arnold, director of the annual fund. "Several of the benefactors and students, meeting each other for the first time, embraced warmly."

"The luncheon was special, we were able to meet the people that have challenged us to expect the best from ourselves," said Doug Nyce '89, who is one of the recipients of the Allan W. Mund Jr. Scholarship. "Not only do these benefactors set goals for us as students, but they challenge us as future alumni to reciprocate their generosity."

"I attended the luncheon so that I could thank the person who provided my scholarship," said Steve Butz '90. "As it turned out, my benefactor donated my scholarship in thanks for generosity he received during his last year at Lebanon Valley?"

In all, over 60 guests attended — each with special stories to share.

Scholarships represented were: the Alumni Scholarship; the Allan W. Mund, Jr. Scholarship; the Carmean String Scholarship; the Hazel and Martin L. Gluntz Scholarship; the Alvin E. Shonk Scholarship; the Edwin and Jesse Zeigler Scholarship; the Cloyd H. Ebersole Scholarship; the Dorothy Yeakel Horn Scholarship; the Neidig Fund for Chemistry; the Esther and Paul Ensminger Scholarship; and the Mary E. McCurdy Graham Scholarship.

First-year endowed scholarships represented were the Perry A. and Laura B. Tschop Memorial School Fund and the Rebecca S. Harvey Scholarship. Other first-time scholarships honored were the Elizabeth M. Geffen Endowed Scholarship and the Arthur L. Peterson Leadership Scholarship.

College Receives Three Grants From The National Science Foundation

The Lebanon Valley College chemistry and biology departments received three grants from the National Science Foundation (NSF) in August; two for chemistry research projects and one to increase the level of laboratory training in a cell biology course offered at the College.

"ATP Regeneration Based on Polyphosphate Kinase," under the direction of Dr. Owen Moe, professor of chemistry, was awarded $50-thousand. The grant is the result of a proposal written by Moe, and is a continuation of previous NSF funding for this project.

NSF also has awarded $16,566 to another chemistry project, "The Introduction of an Atomic Absorption Spectrophotometer into the Chemistry Curriculum to Strengthen Laboratory Instruction." Dr. Richard Cornelius, chairperson of the chemistry department, is overseeing the use of the instrument and wrote the proposal to NSF for additional funding.

NSF awarded $21,462 to Lebanon Valley College's biology department for the project, "Improvement of Laboratory Experience in Comparative Histology." This grant proposal was written by Dr. Allan F. Wolfe, professor of biology.

Douglas Nyce '89 and John Brenner '90 speak with Allan W. Mund Sr., representing The Allan W. Mund Jr. Scholarship, during the Scholarship Benefactors Luncheon.

Moe's research project is in the area of biotechnology, and involves the use of enzymes to synthesize biologically important molecules. The overall goal of the research project is to develop an immobilized system for ATP regeneration which could be used in enzyme reactors to produce medically-related products such as antibiotics, hormones, and growth factors.

Research on this project has been conducted for the past six years, with support coming from NSF, Research Corporation, and the American Chemical Society's Petroleum Research Fund. During this time, 12 undergraduate chemistry, biochemistry, and biology majors from Lebanon Valley College have been involved in carrying out this research.

Funds for Dr. Cornelius' project will support the purchase of an atomic absorption spectrophotometer which will be placed in the College's Garber Science Center. The instrument will be used primarily to analyze trace amounts of metals, such as the amount of sodium in "sodium free" antacids.

The primary use of the instrument will be by Lebanon Valley College students, but high school students attending the College's summer Youth Scholars Institute program in chemistry will also use the instrument.

The instrument will find another use in a research project on the synthesis of platinum-containing anti-cancer drugs. Earlier this year, Dr. Cornelius received a $50-thousand grant from the National Cancer Institute to support this project. The atomic absorption spectrophotometer is capable of analyzing extremely small concentrations of platinum.

In biology, the NSF grant will enable students in histology and independent study courses to section and study plastic-embedded tissues, to study cells and tissues with fluorescence microscopic techniques, and to photograph their results with state-of-the-art photomicrographic equipment. The funds also will provide a safe staining area for students to use hazardous materials.

The laboratory component of the course included the study of prepared slides of various tissue types and organ systems as well as the routine histological and histochemical staining of paraffin-embedded tissues. This laboratory experience culminated in a student project which utilized some of the techniques learned in the course and was presented in a poster format.

With this new equipment, the course can be redesigned to provide biology majors, as well as biochemistry majors, with a strong morphological background at the cell level for their advanced molecular and biochemical courses.

Grant Funds Cancer Research

The National Cancer Institute, through its program, "Academic Research Enhancement Awards," awarded the chemistry department a two-year, $50-thousand grant in May. The grant was the result of a proposal submitted by Dr. Richard Cornelius, chairperson of the chemistry department.

The cancer grant funds a project, "Phosphato Complexes of Platinum," which studies chemistry related platinum-containing anti-cancer drugs. The world's largest selling cancer drug is cisplatin, a compound containing platinum.

Faculty Members Awarded For Excellence In Teaching

President John A. Synodinos recognized William H. Fairlamb, professor of music, and Nevelyn J. Knisley, adjunct associate professor of music, for teaching excellence at the College's Opening Convocation ceremonies in September.

Fairlamb received the Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching. Knisley received the adjunct teaching award for instructional excellence and campus/community service. Henceforth the award will be known as the Nevelyn J. Knisley Award.

Fairlamb joined the faculty in 1947. For 28 summers he was a member of the concert staff of the Bay View Summer Conservatory of Music in Bay View, MI, where he served as solo pianist, member of the duo-piano ensemble, and the trio-in-residence.

He is a graduate of the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music, where he was a student of Olga Samaroff. He also has studied with Harold Bauer and Charles De Bodo. During the tenure of David Epstein as conductor of the Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra, Fairlamb was program annotator for those concerts. He has conducted workshops for piano students and teachers both on and off campus.

Fairlamb is currently State Certification Chairman of the Pennsylvania Music Teachers Association. He also is Director of Music at St. Andrews Presbyterian

"There are a large number of platinum compounds that have already been prepared and tested for anti-cancer activity," says Cornelius. "Some of them are highly effective, and some have no effect. Very subtle structural differences in these compounds can make an enormous difference in their biological activity."

Cornelius explains that nearly all of these compounds are highly toxic. "In our study, we are trying to find compounds that are less toxic, while, at the same time, maintaining anti-cancer activity," states Cornelius. The grant provides student stipends for summer research and funds to purchase a computer-controlled atomic absorption spectrophotometer.

"The students have had an opportunity to work at the frontier of chemistry," says

Church, Lebanon. Fairlamb was named an Outstanding Educator of America in 1971 and in 1972 was the recipient of the Lebanon Valley College Alumni Association Citation for his outstanding service to the College. In 1985, Fairlamb received the Excellence in Music Award from the Lebanon County Choral Society.

Fairlamb has been named by the Music Teachers National Association as a Master Teacher, one of the few so designated in Pennsylvania.

Knisley received her Bachelor of Music degree from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Oberlin, OH, where she was a scholarship student, studied piano with Frank Shaw and Emil Danenberg, and voice with Robert Fountain. She held a graduate assistantship in accompanying and received her master of fine arts degree from Ohio State University, Athens, OH, where she studied composition with Karl Ahrendt.

Knisley taught piano at the Oberlin Conservatory prior to coming to Lebanon Valley College in 1954. She served as a full-time faculty member at Lebanon Valley College from 1954 to 1958, and assumed her present position at the College in 1970.

She is constantly in demand as a soloist, accompanist, chamber musician, and adjudicator.

Cornelius. "At the same time, they helped to address important medical problems."

Students who assisted in the summer project that began in May, were Carl Miller, a junior chemistry/computer science major, and Matt Vera, a sophomore chemistry major.

College Appointments

Ellen Arnold, to director of the annual fund and special events. Arnold received a B.A. in economics/mathematics from Bucknell University.

Susan Egner '82, to instructor of Spanish. Egner received a B.A. in religion/Spanish from Lebanon Valley College and an M.A. in Spanish from Middlebury College.

Russell Owens '61, to supervisor of program services. Owens received a B.S. in education from Lebanon Valley College.

James Forsha '79, to visiting instructor of English. Forsha received a B.A. in English from Lebanon Valley College and an M.A. in English from Millersville University.

Dr. Robert Hrees, to assistant professor of mathematics and computer science. Hrees received a B.A. in math from Antioch College. He received an A.B. and an M.A. in mathematics, an M.S. in computer science, and a Ph.D. in mathematics from Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

George Lovell, to superintendent of buildings and grounds.

Daniel McKinley, to director of undergraduate leadership studies and assistant professor of leadership studies. McKinley received a B.S. in engineering from the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, an M.A. in literature from Wesleyan University, an M.A. in counseling and a Doctoral Candidate in student development from the University of Maryland.

Promotions

Debbie Fullam '81, from academic coordinator and lecturer in computer science, to assistant to the president for institutional research.

Kathy Tierney, head coach of the women's field hockey and softball teams, has been named assistant athletic director/administrative coordinator for summer sports camps.

Admissions Report

1988-89 Recruiting Year Begins

With fall and cooler weather upon us, Lebanon Valley College's admissions and financial aid staff is hard at work recruiting the Class of 1993.

Staff members, including six professionals and three secretaries, will visit over 500 high schools and junior colleges and will receive more than 12,000 inquiries from prospective students over the next nine months.

College faculty, administrators, and support personnel also play a key role in the recruiting process. "At Lebanon Valley, we believe that admissions is everyone's concern. Everyone on campus is willing and ready to cover high school 'college nights,' to handle inquiries, and to help prospective students make the most informed decision possible," said Greg Stanson '63, dean of enrollment management services.

Trees will shed their leaves this fall, but will be highlighted soon with winter's snow.

Alumni Ambassadors Integral to College Recruitment

Under the leadership of John Metka '60, Alumni Association president and chair of the Alumni Ambassadors Committee, the admissions office received a tremendous boost from the alumni/admissions network.

Over the 1987-88 recruiting year, 118 members of the Class of 1992 were contacted either in person or by telephone by a Lebanon Valley alumnus.

"The admissions office received many comments from students and parents about the positive impression alumni contacts made on them," said Greg Stanson '63, dean of enrollment management services.

This year, the goal is to strengthen and expand the Alumni Ambassadors Program.

Alumni can help in a variety of ways. First, send the names and addresses of any prospective students to the admissions office or call 1-800-445-6181, so that the College can send introductory materials. Second, consider hosting a reception for prospective students in your home; this one-on-one contact will help the admissions office cover a wider range of geographic areas. Third, if you know prospective students in your area and are planning a trip to campus, consider bringing them along; the Admissions Office is eager to host anyone an alumnus brings to the College. Fourth, represent the College at a high school "College Night" program (the schedule of high schools is listed below).

If you would like to help, contact Mary Jean Bishop '84, Director of Alumni Services, at 717/867-6220. Lebanon Valley alumni are very effective spokespersons for the College. Your assistance is important in helping attract highly qualified students to the campus.

Petrofes Retires

Jerry Petrofes, associate professor of physical education and head wrestling and golf coach, retired after 25 years of service.

Jerry Petrofes, wrestling coach at Lebanon Valley College since 1963, announced his retirement for health reasons effective September 1.

Petrofes is a 1953 graduate of Euclid High School, Euclid, OH. He received his B.S. in health and physical education in 1958, and his M.Ed. from Kent State University, Kent, OH. He wrestled in both junior and senior high school and all four years as an undergraduate at Kent State.

In 1957, Petrofes began his coaching career at Ravenna Township High School, OH, followed by Aurora High School, OH. He was assistant wrestling coach at Williams College, Williamstown, MA, during their 1962 season. He came to Lebanon Valley College in 1963 and has been head wrestling coach since that time.

In his 25 years at the College, he compiled a 212-173-5 mark, and produced 40 conference placewinners, four Middle Atlantic Conference champions, and five Division III All-Americans.

Petrofes has also been the College's golf coach. His golf teams have produced three All-Americans and were nationally ranked for three seasons.

In addition to his coaching duties, Petrofes served as the College athletic trainer from 1963-1971, as athletic director from 1971-1980, and as associate professor of physical education.

Petrofes is a 1987 District III Wrestling Hall-of-Fame inductee.

Tierney Named Assistant Athletic Director

Kathy Tierney, East Petersburg, PA, has been named assistant athletic director at Lebanon Valley College. Tierney, the women's field hockey and softball coach, had been the women's athletic representative since 1983.

"In this position, my responsibilities will include summer sports camps, and various duties within both the men's and women's athletic department."

Tierney has served on the NCAA Field Hockey Regional Selection Committee since 1986. She has chaired the Pennsylvania Lacrosse Selection Committee and the College Field Hockey Coaches Association Committee since 1987. This is also Tierney's second year serving as secretary for the Women's Athletic Representatives Association.

Tierney's five year coaching career at Lebanon Valley has included two field hockey teams ranked in the nation's top twenty for Division III. Last year her field hockey team won the Southeast Division of the Middle Atlantic Conference with a perfect 6-0 mark.

Quinter to Add Scouting Duties

According to the Pheonix Suns head coach and director of player personnel, Cotton Fitzsimmons, Tod Quinter '80 will add scouting duties to his video services coordinator position with the Suns.

Quinter, Nazareth, PA, has been coordinating video with the Suns the last two years.

Quinter, a guard on the Lebanon Valley men's basketball team from 1976-1980, holds two season records for the Flying Dutchmen: the most assists (17) for a single game (Muhlenburg, Feb. 3, 1979), and the most assists in a year (191) during the 1978-1979 season.

Larthey Named Head Wrestling Coach

Larry Larthey '72, Elizabethville, PA, has been named the new head wrestling coach at Lebanon Valley College. Prior to coming here, Larthy spent 12 years as head coach at Upper Dauphin High School.

At Upper Dauphin, Larthey produced 10 state qualifiers, 25 district and regional qualifiers, and numerous sectional champions. Larthey's teams have placed high in the state championships, placed fourth in District III, and won Section IV team titles twice. His overall record at Upper Dauphin stands at 101-87-5.

Larry Larthey '72, is the new head wrestling coach for Lebanon Valley College.

Fall Sports Notes

The Flying Dutchmen football team stopped a six-year Homecoming day losing streak with a 24-7 win over Albright College. The last Homecoming Day victory came against Swarthmore, 14-7, in 1981. In September, the Valley gridders broke a 17 game "on the road" losing streak with a 3-3 tie against Bridgewater College. The last road victory occurred on September 19, 1984, at Dickinson College (17-9). Head football coach Jim Monos is 4-0-1 against opponents outside the state of PA. The women's field hockey team will play in the MAC playoffs for the second straight season after dominating the Northwest Section with a 4-0-1 record. The Valley women clinched home field advantage for the playoffs with a 3-0 win over Lycoming during which Sandy Aumiller '90, Sue Partilla '90, and Kristen Brandt '90, tallied one goal each. The number eight ranked team in the PA region will take an overall 11-3-2 record into the MAC playoffs. The men's soccer team is one win away from a school record. Their fourth win came against King's College, 2-1. On Parents Day, the soccer team tied Widener University, 0-0, in two overtimes. In September, women's volleyball began its second season of varsity status with a split at Eastern College. lost to Eastern 2-1 (13-15, 15-1, 14-16), but defeated Ursinus 2-0 (15-6, 15-5). The Volleyball team is currently 14-10, with their last win coming against Lycoming College 3-1 (15-7, 12-15, 15-4, 15-10). The women's cross country team finished 6th out of 18 teams at the Lebanon Valley Invitational Cross Country Meet with 172 points. Senior co-captain Cindy Sladek won individual honors in college women's division with a time of 19:10. The men's cross country team finished 4th out of 21 teams with 126 points at the Invitational. junior co-captain John Galvin finished 16th with a time of 27:29.

Lebanon Valley cross-country teams members Cindy Sladek (338), Sue Yingst (33), and Joann Giannetino (333) run in the Lebanon Valley Invitational at Memorial Lake State Park. Sladek finished first with a time of 19:10. Yingst placed 23rd (20:55) and Giannettino 50th (22:45).

The Father Of Lexan

After 35 years with General Electric Plastics, the dean of "Fox University" steps down

by R. Bruce Farren

Few individuals, short of George Washington, earn enough respect in their life-time to be called the "Father" of anything.

But at General Electric, there is someone who has qualified. Dr. Dan Fox '48, retiring manager of chemical development for GE Plastics. He is internationally recognized as the "Father of Lexan," one of the most popular engineered materials in the world. Lexan resin is now manufactured on three continents, is found on every continent, and went to the moon.

"When the astronauts landed on the moon, the fishbowls they had over their heads—that was Lexan resin," Fox says. "I got a big kick out of that."

Fox describes his "invention" of Lexan as a bit of serendipity. "I was looking for one thing and discovered another," he says.

Not a bad accident.

After graduating from Lebanon Valley in 1948, Fox received his M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma. Six months out of post graduate school, Fox was on temporary assignment with General Electric's Corporate Research and Development Center (CR&D) in Schenectady, NY,—in a program to give new scientists an insight into the capabilities of the famed research center.

Admits Fox, "I had no experience with polymers, but I entered heartily into the investigation to discover a better thin film insulating material for wire."

That was 1953 and experienced scientists at CR&D had all the ingredients for success except "their results kept deteriorating when exposed to water." Fox recalled his own post-graduate experience when he was unable to break down a substance known as quaiacol carbonate using boiling water.

When he attempted to create a new polymer—using that same substance—as a possible solution for the wire-coating project, he wound up with a mass so hard he couldn't rescue his metal stirring rod from it.

"We kept it around the laboratory for several months as a curiosity piece," Fox recalls. "We even used it to hammer in nails. I still thought we could have worked with it to make a better wire insulation. But the people heading the project were then on the verge of success, using their own research. So my glob kind of just sat there."

Little needs to be added as to what that glob meant to General Electric and the world. It became the first GE-invented polymer and led to the company's preeminent position today in the world of high tech engineering plastics.

Not only has Dan Fox changed a company business, but he has changed the lives of the people and places he has come in contact with.

When Fox's decision to retire became known in Pittsfield, MA, GE Plastics' world headquarters, a local journalist editorialized on the chemist's role in changing the community as well as western Massachusetts.

"It's a long way from a lab experiment that went wrong to a leading player in the Pittsfield economy," the journalist reported. "Try to think what might have happened if the experiment had gone right...There are many within General Electric who say that without Lexan, without Dan Fox, there would be no GE Plastics. Without GE Plastics, the economic shape of Pittsfield might be considerably different. ...Plastics is a vital part of the company's presence. Pittsfield calls itself the Plastics Technology Capital of the nation. There is no question that GE Plastics has generated other plastics production businesses. So, in many ways, Dan Fox has played a key role in shaping the economic future of the area."

But many who know him will tell you Dan Fox is more than an economic driver. With his curiosity, humility, and a little bit of puckish humor, he is very much the mentor and role model for many in General Electric—much as Dr. Andrew Bender, chemistry professor at Lebanon Valley in the 1940s, had been for him.

Bender, described in the 1947 College yearbook as the "cornerstone of the chemistry department...incessant worker, patient, generous...a true friend," inspired Fox to give up chemical engineering to pursue, instead, "pure chemistry." "His dedication to his research and to his students was most clearly demonstrated when he spent his own money to purchase equipment, supplies, and instruments for the College's chemistry lab," said Fox.

"He also taught me an important lesson about the necessity to expect the best from myself. He was the first Lebanon Valley College professor to leave the room during an exam," Fox said. "He told us before he left, 'If you're going to cheat, the only person you cheat is yourself.'"

In 1960, while working on a new resin, Fox reciprocated Bender's example. He had an opening on his staff and a young college graduate showed up to interview for the job. Fox wangled an hour at the end of that busy schedule to talk to the young man about polyphenylene oxide, which at the time was a new resin and unglamorous compared to Lexan. The young graduate was Jack Welch, now Chief Executive Officer of General Electric.

As Fox remembers, "I did a heck of a sales job, got him to cancel his plans to leave that night and convinced him to take the job."

Welch's response to that memory was that he was impressed with Fox's eagerness.

"Here he had invented Lexan and was already pooh-poohing it and was off to make this new thing bigger and better," Welch said. "It takes a unique person to do that. Most people want to continue to do what they know best."

But Fox has never stopped short of expecting the best from himself.

Popkin "Pop" Shenian, manager of Ventures Technology for GE Plastics and an associate of Dan Fox for 25 years, has his own memories.

"Dan has made great contributions to this business, but one of the greatest was hiring a cadre of outstanding scientists. We call ourselves graduates of 'Fox U.,' and we are all very proud of it."

Chemist Edward Peters, a member of "Fox U.," remembers the time "when several of us spent a couple of months using very sophisticated laboratory equipment working on a project. In spite of all the modern equipment, we were unable to make the reaction work. After two months of waiting for us, Dr. Fox became impatient. He walked into our laboratory, took a few pieces of crude equipment and a beaker and made the polymer on his first attempt." Peters adds, "He's either a great experimentalist, or very lucky."

To this, Dr. Bender would probably respond, "Dan's success comes from never cheating."

Even though "retired," Dr. Fox is still working half-days on new plastics—one is a lightweight auto-body plastic that will withstand heat and impact like steel, and the other is a plastic food packaging that will replace cans and bottles.

During Dr. Fox's 35 years at General Electric, he was awarded the Charles P. Steinmetz Award, presented by GE to leading engineers and scientists in the company who have distinguished themselves through unusual technical achievement. Additionally, he was nominated for the U.S. Presidential Technology Award and to the Plastics Hall of Fame. In 1976, he was awarded the Lebanon Valley Alumni Association's "Alumni Citation" for outstanding technical contributions in the field of chemical research and to society.

Alumni Profile: Deborah L. Scott '71

As a student herself, and later as a teacher, Deb Scott admits to feeling a certain discomfort with science. Now, as education director for the Museum of Scientific Discovery, she wants to help kids see science as fun, and to give teachers new confidence and techniques for teaching the subject.

Scott is not a scientist. She is a teacher, and one whose career had followed a path that, unintentionally, has given her "everything I need" for her current role.

After graduating from Lebanon Valley College in 1971, she and her husband lived in Charleston, South Carolina (where she taught fourth grade for four years); Chambersburg (where she was a substitute teacher); Galeton, Potter County (where she taught sixth grade for one year and fifth grade for two years); and Harrisburg (where she was a substitute in the city schools).

From there, she went to a position in Harrisburg's Strawberry Garden preschool day care center—where, she says, she "really discovered my most comfortable feelings about science and my greatest interest." She wishes, in fact, that she had taught preschool first.

Because in pre-school, Scott says, "you really have to do science the way it's supposed to be done. You really have to do science hands-on. They can't read. They certainly aren't going to sit and listen to an explanation, and even a demonstration is not going to hold their attention unless there is something for them to do."

Hands-on experiences "work," Scott says. "There's that old proverb...I hear and I forget. I see and I remember. I do and I understand."

What Scott strives for is to help children reach the point of that "sudden click" of understanding.

As a child herself, Scott says, she was interested in what an adult would call the natural sciences. "Animals were my passion." When she took the job at the museum and learned "that I would be able to hold snakes and other fascinating things, I couldn't wait...In fact, the first week, I carried a small snake around my neck wherever I went. I'd never been able to hold a snake that often before, or anytime I wanted to."

She recalls a childhood in which she followed a route around her yard, regularly lifting up certain rocks or poking in piles of leaves to check for signs of animal life.

"It wasn't until I was in eighth grade that I got my first dog, and that was just like being in heaven to have a puppy to take care of." Today she has a cat and a dog—"and a box turtle living in the basement until we get to the third week of Pennsylvania Science [a museum program], which is going to include a workshop on turtles." After the workshop, "we'll take him and put him somewhere safe."

During most of her childhood, Scott says, she intended to become a veterinarian. But in her junior year of high school, she took a chemistry course that changed her mind.

"I had no trouble understanding. I had no trouble getting As and Bs. But I felt uncomfortable because it was the first time I really had to observe, analyze, and come up with my own results."

She remembers thinking, "I'm going to have to do a whole lot more of this to be a veterinarian, and I don't trust my answers."

She switched to teaching, she says, because she is interested in many things, "and teaching seemed the place where I could do everything."

"Teaching has given me the experiences that I need with all ages of children and adults. It has given me the experience in expressing, explaining, and simplifying ideas which I need here."

In spite of her increasing interest in science, Scott says she feels she will always be involved in teaching.

"We're learning different things all the time," Scott says. And the things that we did learn in school are probably not current anymore, in some cases. It could very easily happen that something you learned would no longer be valid. But if you've picked up that exploratory attitude, that curiosity and that interest, it's going to make it a lot easier to adapt to changing facts and a changing world."

Founders Day Award Recipient Dies

Harold S. Mohler

Harold S. Mohler, 1984 recipient of the Lebanon Valley College Founders' Day Award, died Wednesday, August 31, at the age of 69.

Mohler, of Hershey, PA, was a retired chairperson of the board of Hershey Foods Corporation and the chairperson of the board of directors of the Hershey Bank.

Mohler served on the board for 22 years and was named chairperson in 1977. His business career was centered at Hershey Foods, which he joined in 1948 as an industrial engineer. He became assistant to the president in 1957 and vice president five years later. He was named president and chief executive officer in 1965. In 1974, he assumed the position of chairperson of the board. He retired from Hershey Foods in 1984.

At the time of his death, he was on the boards of Herco, PP&L, Ashland Oil Inc., and Stabler Companies, Inc. He had also served as director and chairperson of the Hershey Trust Co.

Mohler is survived by his wife, Melda, a son, two daughters, and five grandchildren.

Message from Charles W. Wolfe '44, National Chairman, 125th Anniversary Campaign...

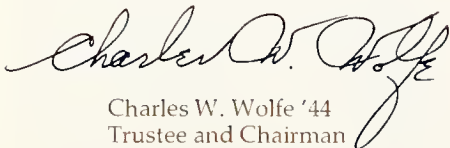

Dear Friends,

As the accompanying report will reveal, the 1987-1988 year was one of substantial achievement for giving to Lebanon Valley College. Total giving surpassed $3.5 million, a ten year high for the College in private voluntary support.

The extraordinary results of the year which ended June 30, 1988, are a tribute to all who have participated in the unprecedented effort in both capital and annual support. Two gifts deserve special mention. Dr. and Mrs. Edward Arnold's major gift encouraged the college to begin construction of the fine sports center which now bears his name. The late Mrs. Cecil Lutz provided a testamentary provision of $1.1 million which has been placed in trust to provide scholarships. In both cases these families saw the strengths of Lebanon Valley and added mightily to our efforts to provide the finest educational opportunities.

Progress on the 125th Anniversary Campaign has been encouraging, with the total now standing at $4.8 million against the $6.5 million goal. Right now volunteers and staff are hard at work, telling the Lebanon Valley story to other alumni, friends, and businesses whose commitments are needed to bring this important effort to a successful conclusion in the near future.

Finally, I would like to express my gratitude on behalf of the Board of Trustees, faculty, staff, and especially the students of Lebanon Valley College to the hundreds, yes thousands of donors whose personal gifts have brought important new resources.

125th Anniversary Campaign at Three-Quarter Mark

Charles W. Wolfe '44, Trustee and National chairperson of the 125th Anniversary Campaign and a veteran of numerous college capital gifts campaigns, is pleased with the results of the fund-raising efforts to date, but he is not allowing anyone to rest on their laurels. "The more than 4.7 million raised so far is a fine tribute to the dedication of the Lebanon Valley College family, but the hardest part of the Campaign is yet to come. In order to secure the remaining funds, we must be more diligent and more enthusiastic than ever."

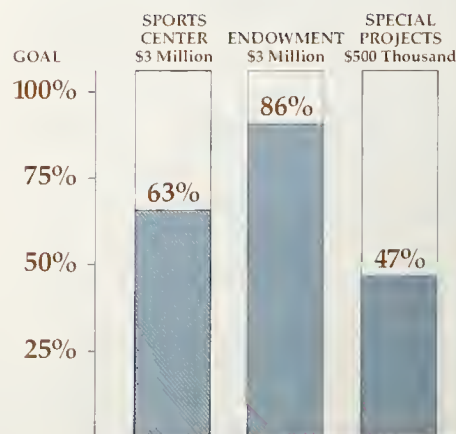

The several phases of the Campaign in progress have produced encouraging results.

The Trustee/Major Gifts phase, under the stewardship of Edward Arnold and Harlan Wengert has made great progress, enlisting 100% participation among those solicited. The Trustees have pledged substantial amounts to both the Sports Center and the endowments. Several scholarship funds have been started, many more have been bolstered, and other endowments created.

Dr. Arthur L. Ford '59, chairperson of the Campus Gifts phase, proudly reports overwhelming faculty and staff support for Lebanon Valley College's latest effort. More than 90% of the faculty have contributed to the Campaign. Although this level of participation can be attributed to many variables, this statistic reflects the campus community's excitement over the Campaign objectives. There is no doubt that this fund-raising effort will help to secure Lebanon Valley College's future well-being. "The faculty sees a clear relationship among good facilities, strong endowment, and quality students", says Dr. Ford. "We hope this relationship can be strengthened so Lebanon Valley College can attract the best students possible through greater financial aid and a more balanced college experience." Over $100,000 has been received in cash and pledges from the campus community.

The Leadership Gifts phase of the 125th Anniversary Campaign is well underway. Proposals have been delivered throughout the country to some of the College's most generous supporters. Dr.

Martin L. Gluntz '53, Leadership Gifts Chairperson, encourages everyone to extend their participation to the fullest. "Lebanon Valley College is a regional and a national resource. Our alumni and friends impact more widely than just the Lebanon Valley; national and international business leaders, noted scientists, renowned musicians, dedicated educators, and religious leaders are among those tracing their roots through Annville. It is our mission to see that this continues."

Other Campaign phases, such as the Special Gifts phase led by Dr. Carroll E. Ditzler '58 and the General Gifts phase under the direction of the Reverend Dr. Gerald D. Kauffman '44, will reach out to the entire Lebanon Valley College family in the days and months ahead. "Everyone's support is necessary and significant," states Charlie Wolfe, "we must all come together to assure that future generations get the best Lebanon Valley College education possible, just as those who went before did for us."

Endowment - Future of Lebanon Valley College

The Edward H. Arnold Sports Center provides a dramatic symbol of the Lebanon Valley College 125th Anniversary Campaign. This outstanding physical fitness resource balances our present "mind-strengthening" academic and "soul-strengthening" spiritual development programs with a new "body-strengthening" recreational program. Several recent studies of college life confirm that this balance helps ensure the future well-being of our graduates by providing the opportunity for a tripartite development of self — with balanced attention to mind, body, and spirit.

Similarly, gifts to the Lebanon Valley College endowment funds help ensure the future well-being of our institution. These monies balance our "budget-based" annual fund drives with perpetual "savings accounts," supporting current programs through annual interest income earned on investments. Endowment funds underwrite faculty research, building maintenance, library purchases, lectureships, professional chairs, equipment requisitions, and named scholarships—all necessary to ensure the future of our College. "The larger the endowment, the less dependent Lebanon Valley College will be on non-tuition income from the Annual Fund and other sources, and the educational opportunities we make available to our students can be enriched," says Dr. Robert Hamilton, Vice President and Controller.

The 125th Anniversary Campaign has rekindled the commitment to Lebanon Valley College's continued strength through endowments. The Trustees, aiming to improve the quality of the undergraduate college experience, set a three million dollar goal in the endowment portion of the Campaign. This is a challenging aim, but securing the future deserves the highest priority.

Through the 125th Anniversary Campaign, named endowed funds can be established with a minimum contribution of $10,000. These pledges may be paid over three to four years and the income can be designated by the donor for new scholarships, discretionary funds, campus beautification, support to student activities, or any other part of the Lebanon Valley College program. For donors 71 years of age or older, a bequest can be included in the will, and, if we are so notified, the amount be counted as a discrete pledge to this Campaign. Those donors wishing to contribute less than $10,000 may add to a current scholarship fund of their choice or direct their donation to the general endowment.

All endowment monies, whether named or not, insure the long-term strength of Lebanon Valley College and provide for the future of this fine institution.

The future of our institution partially relies on today's gifts to Lebanon Valley College's endowment.

Annual Fund

The 1987-88 Annual Fund for Lebanon Valley College

A message from Chairman, Sam Willman '67

On behalf of the students, faculty and staff, my sincere thanks to all who supported the 1987-88 Annual Fund. I am pleased to report that 27 percent of our alumni contributed last year — a five percent increase in participation over 1986-87. In addition, alumni giving increased by 20 percent to $228,291, nearly one-half of the $537,304 total raised.

Income from the Annual Fund provides a vital portion of the current operating budget. Supported items include: student financial aid, faculty development, concerts, both inter-collegiate and intramural athletics, lectureships, religious programs, student internships, and maintenance of our lovely campus.

Donor Clubs are an important part of the College's Annual Fund structure and I salute those who have demonstrated leadership through Donor Club giving. The members of these distinguished giving groups are listed separately on the following pages.

In closing, the support of alumni, friends, parents and others for the 1987-88 Annual Fund has been outstanding. Thank you for investing in the future of our fine institution.

Charter Club

$200 - $599

The 1867 Charter of Lebanon Valley College directs that the founders shall "establish and maintain forever an institution of learning of high grade." Those who support this mandate bring excellence to the educational experience of the young men and women currently enrolled.

Restricted Gifts And Grants

Lebanon Valley College received a significant number of contributions which were designated by the donor for specific programs or projects during the 1987-88 fiscal year. Restricted income totaled $699,350, which reflects a 19 percent increase in restricted giving over 1986-87. It should be noted that these figures do not include giving for the 125th Anniversary Campaign which is detailed elsewhere in this report.

We recognize the following donors who have provided for the prosperous future of Lebanon Valley College through a restricted gift or grant.

Tower And Turret Council

$5,000 and above

The tower and turrets of the College's Administration Building rise above the campus, symbolizing strength and vitality. The generosity of individuals who make significant restricted gifts to endowment and to selected programs and projects is evidence of their dedication to the long-term goals of the College.
